'The Daily Prayer Rosary'

A Quiet Day Led by Revd Clay Roundtree

The Revd Clay Roundtree, author of The Daily Prayer Rosary published by Canterbury Press, offers a new way of praying the rosary using the psalms and Biblical songs of the Bible. Archbishop John Sentamu describes the materials from the book as "...an ancient means of prayer married with scripture and liturgy to create a new and inspiring way of communing with the Blessed and Glorious Trinity. I commend it to you and pray that you may find your prayer life renewed."

The prayer method is introduced by Clay in the course of the Quiet Day, and he will provide all the materials needed for the day. The meditations do not employ the popular 'Hail Mary' prayer as known in the Roman Catholic tradition, but instead uses verses from the Bible and familiar prayers to Anglicans.

" In 1998 I discovered the joy of praying with beads quite accidentally by browsing in the shop at the Community of the Resurrection, Mirfield. In the shop there was a simple prayer rope with knots for beads and attached to the rope was the Jesus Prayer. I've been praying with beads ever since. I think the inspiration for The Daily Prayer Rosary came some years ago when I made the connection that many of our commonly used canticles such as the Benedictus and the Magnificat fit easily into ten verses which got me thinking about the ten-bead decades of the rosary. The beads help to concentrate my focus on God, making me more attentive in prayer. The rosary for me isn't about keeping count of how many times I've said a prayer, but instead makes the activity of prayer more embodied and focussed. I feel like my relationship with Jesus has grown and deepened by praying in this way and would recommend praying with beads to anyone!" -Clay Roundtree
